WAR SUMMARY OF THE LATEST EVENTS

The capture of the village of Cumieres, on the west bank of the Meuse, about three-quarters of a mile south of Goose Hill and six miles from Verdun as the crow flies, is reported from Berlin. French official reports admit that the Germans obtained a lodgement in the French positions after a prolonged and sanguinary struggle. The possession of the high ground at Cumieres is of importance to the Germans in that it gives gun positions from which to bombard more effectively the French lines to the west on Dead Man's Hill and the second line of defence farther to the southeast. It must be remembered that west of the river the Germans are still hammering at Hill 304 and Dead Man's Hill, which correspond to Beaumont, Louvemont and other advanced fortifications on the east side carried in the first rush of the campaign in February.

The main line of defence on the west which corresponds to Douaumont, Vaux and Pepper Hill on the east, has not yet been approached by the enemy. It is known as the Bois Bourrus position, and consists of a group of field works of great strength connecting Forts de Bois Bourrus, de Marre and Charny. Behind this line there is a third, of which the key position is Fort de Chaume, on the highest point west of the river in the vicinity of Verdun. If the Germans, following up their capture of the village of Cumieres, can force the French to evacuate Dead Man's Hill, to the west, they will then have to begin operations against the Bois Bourrus group of forts. In attacking these positions there is no possibility of taking shelter. The land falls away from the earthworks towards the northwest in a long, glacial-like slope, up which the Germans must advance to the attack in face of the great concentration of French artillery known to have been made behind the line of the forts. Dead Man's Hill and Hill 304 have cost the Germans terrific losses, and the end is not yet. It is predicted by experts who have examined the Bois Bourrus positions that they will prove far more deadly to the German infantry than the outer line of defence has proved.

While the fierce struggle for possession of Cumieres was in progress during the night of Tuesday the battle for Fort Douaumont continued on the east side of the river. The Germans launched a series of what the official French report speaks of as "ferocious assaults" without counting the cost in human lives. During the night and in the early morning the French held their ground well although to the

AN OPPORTUN

It might be well for the the County of Lennox and to now give some attention to the question of a House of Refuge county. Mr. Reuben D. Schlate of the Township of Carleton Place, who died on the 18th of November, 1915, left a considerable estate, in which will be appointed A. W. Grange, merchant of T. A. Martin, farmer of Carleton Place, T. B. German, Barrister-Napanee, his executors, and quashing a certain portion of his estate to his immediate relatives said deceased bequeathed ten thousand dollars to the General Hospital, and his estate he gave to his said executor to be by them applied to charitable objects or purposes his said executors might select upon. The said executors, to properly carry out the trust in them, are now in search of charitable objects upon which to bestow this residuary estate among other objects they are able to applying a large part of this residuary estate towards the of a House of Refuge in the County of Lennox and Addington in order to do this they must interest and co-operation of the Council, and so that the county be able to take advantage of this opportunity the executors have decided to appear before the Court at its next session, which place on June 6th, to see what can be entered into for the erection and maintenance of a House of Refuge. The money in the hands of the executors, together with grant, in such cases, from the Government, would amount to a considerable sum, and if the county wishes to take advantage of this privilege necessary for them to take it up with the executors at once, wise the executors will be select some other object of the county thus lose this splendid opportunity.

NEWS NOTES.

War Office advices indicate that a large number of horses will be required from Canada this summer for military purposes.

Mr. N. W. Rowell told the Ontario Women's Liberal Association that the abolition of the bar will clear the way for a great forward step in social reform.

Albert J. Batt of Buffalo, his wife and her mother, Mrs. Sarah Lieber, were drowned in the Niagara River at Bridgeburg when their automobile backed off a ferry.

Montreal, May 24.—A hailstorm about 6.30 this evening did considerable damage to windows in this city, and smashed about a thousand electric light bulbs in Dominion Park.

Gladyds and Cassie Casselman, daughters of Clinton Casselman of North Williamsburg, were instantly killed when their father's horse became unmanageable and dashed into a train on the G.T.R. near Morrisburg.

Rome, May 24.—Despatches from points in northern Italy describe the ferocity of the fighting. Hundreds of bodies are said to have been seen rolling down the steep slopes of the rugged Alps, great human snowballs that come to rest in the valleys below.

Pte. Fred Willard of the 155th Battalion, who had been transferred from the 80th Battalion on account of sickness, is dead. He was only 18 years of age. He was a native of Stella, Amherst Island. The remains were sent to his home. His father is a member of the 146th Frontenac Battalion.

Washington, May 24th.—The American note to Great Britain and France reiterating, though more strongly than in the previous note, the Government's protests against the seizure and detention of legitimate mail matter bound to and from the United States has been handed to the British and French Ambassadors here.

Toronto has given fully 35,000 men for overseas service. The names of 18,500 other men of military age who have not enlisted have been secured as a result of a canvass of the city by the Bantam Battalion. Were they all to enlist, one in nine of the total population would be in uniform—a proportion not yet reached in the United Kingdom.

The British compulsion bill which has now become law makes service of all males between eighteen and forty-one obligatory when required, either with the colors or in industrial operations connected with national defence. A strike of miners or railway employees could be at once ended by calling up the strikers for military service and assigning them to operate trains or mine coal.

Overland

Six $1600

Model 86—f.o.b. Toronto

Real Comfort for Seven

Canvass the world and you will not find as big a car as the Overland Six, at anywhere near so low a price, $1600.

You who prefer seven passenger capacity, must pay a heavy excess in price to get so much real seven passenger comfort in any other car.

And to back up its big roomy seven passenger carrying capacity there is the powerful six cylinder Overland motor.

Take your full quota of seven big passengers and see how smoothly and easily, without a sign of effort, your powerful motor speeds away with even an overload.

Slow down to a crawl—don't touch the gear shift—keep it in high—but just touch your accelerator.

Without a tremor, smoothly, easily, swiftly, you acquire any desired speed.

That's genuine six cylinder pickup—a big outstanding Overland Six fact. And it's that big fact about this big car that makes its price, $1600, so small in comparison.

Overland four cylinder motor will "pick up" with many another six.

Our only purpose in building a six, at all is to supply with genuine Overland finality and economy that extremist demand for the luxury of bigness and lightning fast pickup.

Overland production—double that of any other builder of cars of like class—makes possible the unapproached value which you get in so big and exceptional a car at so low a price—$1600.

Have the Overland dealer overload the six and demonstrate its comfort and lightning fast pickup.

You cannot equal it for anywhere near the price.

PROGRESS CONTINUES.

Russian Armies Keeping Up Their
March on Mosul.

LONDON, May 22.—The Russians are continuing their march toward Mosul (ancient Nineveh), according to Sunday night's Petrograd official report.

A Constantinople correspondent
says that Field Marshal Liman von Sanders is assembling a strong force of Turkish troops at Sivas, in Asiatic Turkey, to oppose the advance of the Russians. The Turks are equipped abundantly with artillery.

The correspondent also says that Turkey has called out recruits of the ages of 17 and 18.

The Russian occupation of Sakiz
and their advance upon the village of Ban is of extreme importance, and establishes a direct line of communication between the two Russian groups which are operating against the Turkish Mesopotamian army.

"Four thousand German troops are expected at Bagdad in June,"
says The Times' Bucharest correspondent. "Twelve thousand Austrians already are there. The Turks are weakening the defence of Constantinople, sending all possible reinforcements to Asia Minor and concentrating a large force at Marash, three days' march north-east of Alexandretta (on the Mediterranean in Northern Syria), where they fear an attempted landing by Entente allies."

Although little has been known regarding the military operations in this immediate district, which lies between Lake Urmiah and Khanikan, on the Persian border north-east of Bagdad, Kurdish bands, supported by Turkish regulars, have been for a long time attempting to make inroads into Persia, and, by cutting off from each other the Russian armies advancing toward the Mesopotamian border, make their progress impossible. It is apparent that in these efforts they had been so successful as to capture the Persian towns of Sakiz and Ban, but, as officially announced, the Russians recently ousted them from the positions, and the danger created by this wedge into the Russian line has been removed.

Ban is near the Turkish border,
and along a 200-mile front the Russian armies are now drawn up close to the Mesopotamian frontier. Military experts believe that further progress for the Russians should be considerably facilitated by this straightening out of the Russian line and the establishment of direct communication, which not only makes further Kurdish inroads impossible, but lightens the difficult task of provisioning, which delayed the Russian progress in Asia Minor.

Key to Suez Canal Suffers Slightly From Shelling—Bombs Are Also Dropped by Aviators at Dunkirk
and Belfort—Allied Air Squad-

Enemy Birdmen in Duels.

LONDON, May 22.—An attack on Port Said, the northernmost point on the Suez Canal, by two Turkish aeroplanes resulted in the death of two and the wounding of 13 civilians and five soldiers, is announced in a statement received by the War Office Sunday night from the British headquarters at Cairo. The official report reads:

"Two army aeroplanes dropped 16
bombs on Port Said Sunday morning, mostly on the Arab quarter. Two civilians were killed and 13 were injured severely. Five soldiers were wounded. The aeroplanes were driven away by anti-aircraft guns."

German aeroplanes carried out since Saturday two bombardments in the region of Dunkirk. About 20 shells were dropped Saturday evening, killing four persons and wounding 15. Sunday another enemy squadron dropped about a hundred bombs in the outskirts of Dunkirk.
Two soldiers and a child were killed and 20 persons were wounded.

Allied aeroplanes pursued the enemy machines and succeeded in bringing down two at the moment
they were about to enter their own lines.

Immediately after the first bombardment 53 French, British, and Belgian aeroplanes flew over the German cantonnments at Weweg and Ghistelles, on which 250 shells were dropped.

German aeroplanes Sunday dropped 15 bombs on Belfort, but the material damage was insignificant.

Saturday in an aerial fight off Nieuport a Belgian aeroplane brought down a German machine, which fell into the sea.

On Saturday the British aeroplanes again had several successful encounters. An aviatik fell on fire
into some trees in the enemy's lines,
one of the occupants falling out.
Another fell in flames into the German lines after an encounter with a

DOMESTIC LIFE IN AFRICA.

A Warning to Little Boys Who Would Like to Be Heathens.

I went with my lantern into Ze's little hut, says Jean Kenyon Mackenzie in the Atlantic Monthly. I sat down by the fire, and there was the family
too. Mendum was heating some water in a big black kettle. The youngest,
Mpioga, still without teeth, was howling in the arms of little brother.
Presently to the light of my lantern
Mendum brings her three-year-old.
She empties her hot water into a wooden bowl; with a sponge of crushed leaves she washes first one little foot and then the other. Kid howls.

His feet are sore, poor little duffer!
He holds out his hand for his father to hold. Mother is relentless until both feet are soaked; then she opens a little leaf packet. There is salve made of the bark of the redwood tree. She adds a little palm oil to this, and very carefully she anoints the little feet.
The sobs subside, and the child walks off on his heels.

Now the mother pours more water
into the bowl, takes the fretful baby
out of the hands of little brother, stands the weeny thing in her belt of beads on the clay floor and swabs her down with water. There is the familiar initial gasp. With her maternal hands she cleanses that little person
all glittering with wet, and she says, looking at me and smiling, "God has sent me much trouble." And the father says, apropos of nothing, "All these have been baptized." I sit on my stool by the fire and feel steeped in the most human domesticity.

Everywhere in the world at this hour little children are whimpering over their evening ablutions. It is a mistake to think that any child of a good mother escapes. So much for the illusions of little boys who would like to be heathens.

brings the welcome but astonishing intelligence that a body of Russian cavalry, after an adventurous ride, has succeeded in joining General Gorringe's forces on the south bank of the Tigris.

How this important junction was effected is still unknown, and the story will be awaited with intense interest. The supposition is that this detachment came from the Russian army which is threatening Khanikan, but it still remains a puzzle where and how the Russians succeeded in crossing the river.

Their sudden appearance with General Gorringe has also raised the question whether the Russians have already cut the Bagdad railway at Mosul. In any case the unexpected appearance of this body of cavalry is as great a surprise as was the first landing of the Russian troops at Marseilles, and is another instance of the swift and stealthy movement of the Russian forces in Asia Minor.

An official communication issued Sunday night concerning the situation along the Tigris follows:

"General Lake reports that on the 19th the enemy vacated the Bethesda advanced position on the right bank of the Tigris. General Gorringe, following up the enemy, attacked and carried the Dujailam redoubt. The enemy is still holding the Sannayyat position on the left bank of the river.

"A force of Russian cavalry has joined General Gorringe after a bold and adventurous ride."

PEACE IS IMPOSSIBLE.

President Wilson is Told of Determination of Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—"The die is cast. Germany must fight on to the bitter end and cannot escape retribution by useless appeals to neutrals for peace."

This is the answer of the Entente Allies to the steadily increasing peace talk which has reached official circles here from Berlin. The Allies' position, it is explained, has been made perfectly clear to President Wilson.

Both the President and Secretary of State Lansing have been informed confidentially from sources close to the Entente capitals that peace proposals now were out of the question. The time is not ripe, it is explained, and the time will not be ripe until Germany's military dominance has been completely broken."

The Entente Allies have translated Germany's peace pleas into the meaning that the Imperial Government now sees the handwriting on the wall, and is taking measures far in advance in an effort to end the war. This Government also has received official reports from its own agents tending to show that Germany is beginning to feel the effects of the "drag" much more deeply than is generally known.

into some trees in the enemy's lines, one of the occupants falling out. Another fell in flames into the German lines after an encounter with a British scout. A third crashed to earth in the British lines near Mari-court. Sunday a fourth machine landed undamaged in the British lines, and the pilot and observer were made prisoner. The British lost one machine.

The weather again being favorable for flying there was much activity in the air. A raid was made by enemy aviators in the region of Baccarat, Epinal, and Vesoul. The material damage was insignificant. Four persons were wounded slightly.

French aviators Saturday night threw numerous bombs on military establishments at Thionville, Etain, and Spincourt, and on the camps in the vicinity of Azannes and Damvillers. The railway station at Lumes was bombarded, causing the rapid flight of trains and a large fire in the railway buildings.

In an aerial engagement between four French aeroplanes and three Fokkers, over Bezange forest, one of the enemy machines was brought down and another Fokker, being attacked, was compelled to descend to earth behind the German lines while under the fire of the French batteries, which destroyed it.

GREECE URGED TO JOIN.

She Must Aid Entente or Go Bankrupt, Says Venizelos.

ATHENS, May 22.—Former Premier Venizelos has contributed an article to The Athens Herald, in which he points out what he considers the mistakes made by the Greek Government. He condemns the "blustering methods" of Premier Skouloudis, and states that the army which, he says, has worn out uniforms and boots, as well as part of the equipment furnished at the mobilization, could not take the field within less than two months, and then only if the Entente powers undertook to furnish the necessary equipment. The task of feeding the army, he says, is becoming daily more problematical. The former Premier hints that Greece is on the verge of bankruptcy, and says: "While there is only one road to salvation, it is precisely that which we will not follow."

The article makes a strong bid for closer relations between Greece and the Allies "before it is too late."

ing sea water rains on ocean floors are always surprised by the very noticeable color of their morning tubs.

Color in sea water is largely a matter of saltiness and density. In the tropics the tremendous evaporation induced by the blazing sun causes the water to be much saltier than in higher latitudes. For many miles north and south of the equator the water of the world's oceans is a deep blue which fades and changes to green the further one goes toward the poles. In the Arctic and Antarctic oceans the greens are almost as vivid as the tropical azures. China's Yellow sea derives its color partly from the muddy water poured in by its great rivers and partly from small organisms which exist there in numbers which exceed the 120,000,000 living creatures to the square mile found on the average.

The question of salt in water brings up our old friend the Dead sea, which contains 23 per cent of solid matter and, bulk for bulk, is heavier than the human body. Many believe, even in Jerusalem, that bathing in this famous body of water is harmful and swimming impossible. This is not the fact. The chloride of magnesium in the water possesses medicinal qualities if it is not permitted to get into the eyes. It is true that the density of the water renders fast progress in swimming difficult, but the impossibility of sinking more than makes up for it.—Agwi News.

Women and the Arts.

I believe that woman loves the arts better than does man. She is better ground for the development of a great artist, for she approaches art with sympathy, while the great bulk of men approach it with fear and dislike, shrinking from the idea that it may distort their self complacency. The prejudice goes so far that, while women are attracted to artists as lovers, men are generally afraid of women who practice the arts or they dislike them. It is not a question of sex; it is a question of art.—W. L. George in Atlantic.

The Mixture in Havana.

"Havana has just the right mixture of old and new," said one traveler. "I like mediaeval forts and sixteenth century cathedrals as well as anybody, but when night comes around it is pleasant to return to a cool, up to date hotel, enjoy a well cooked supper and spend the evening walking on the electrically lighted Prado, dancing at the Plaza or Miramar or watching the roof garden movies."

Meanwhile Johnston, K. C., with Carvell, K.C., at his back, does good work in nailing down the facts that fuses, time or graze, could have been made just as easily, quite as quickly and considerably more cheaply in Canada than they were in the United States had Canadian manufacturers been given the chance. Colonel Carnegie grudgingly admitted two out of three of these points but dissented on the third point—quickness of delivery. Events have shown that Colonel Carnegie was wrong in supposing that the Yankees could get a faster move on than the Canadians, but it is not in his text to say so and he still claims "airgency" as his great excuse for handing out fuse contracts to Colonel John Wesley Allison's bands of hope. In view of Lloyd Harris' evidence this "airgency" of the Colonel's takes a different shape. It was not so much an "airgency" of time and more an "airgency" from persons in authority in whose employ the Colonel was. According to Mr. Harris, it was Colonel Carnegie who told him "to see Allison" and it was also Colonel Carnegie who told him that the fuse contracts were awarded to the American companies "Under pressure." Just here Colonel Carnegie's word clashes with Mr. Harris', so that the public can take which word it pleases—the word of Mr. Harris, who has nothing to fear from the

THE GIANT MOUNT EVEREST.

This Still Unconquered Peak Is In a Wild Country That Is Extremely Difficult to Traverse and Has So Far Defied the Surveyors of India.

Some interesting facts about Mount Everest may not generally be known. Many persons have wondered how the determination of the height of Mount Everest could be so exact that its elevation is fixed at precisely 29,002 feet. It happened in this way: In 1840 and 1850 six trigonometrical determinations of the height of the mountain were obtained by the Indian survey at six different stations, all south of the mountain. The height of 29,002 feet assigned to Mount Everest was the mean of the six different values for the height just obtained.

But the geographical survey of India informed the world in 1908 that Mount Everest is higher than it was computed to be by those six trigonometrical determinations. It reported that between 1881 and 1902 six other determinations of the height of the mountain were made at five stations, all excepting one gies's word clashes with Mr. Harris, so that the public can take which word it pleases—the word of Mr. Harris, who has nothing to fear from the Shell Committee, or the word of Colonel Carnegie, who has everything to expect from it. In support of Mr. Harris' evidence there is a letter on file in the Munition Board's office not yet read in court—a letter which tells Premier Borden what is going on in the Shell Committee and outlines the "pressure" which is being used to switch fuse contracts from Canadian manufacturers.

The subsequent action of the Shell Committee tends to show that it regarded Mr. Harris as a Canadian manufacturer who ought to be placated. The Harris-Russell Company was awarded a contract for five hundred thousand fuses—at seventy-five cents less per fuse, it is true, than United States manufacturers were getting—which seems to indicate that there was a real grievance. Indeed the grievance was so acute that the Shell Committee didn't wait to get more orders from the British War Office, but awarded the contract, as Colonel Carnegie explains, out of a "reservoir" which the Shell Committee calculated would materialize later on. More than that when it came to Mr. Harris' cars what favours the American fuse contractors were getting in the shape of cash advances, the Russell-Harris Company was also soaked down with a cash advance of some proportions. In spite of which Mr. Harris and Mr. Russell persist in telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help them God.

Another item of truth that has come to the top is that the difficulty of making time fuses has been greatly overruled. A time fuse is no more difficult to make than a Waterbury watch, although war, the bountiful jade, pays from three to three dollars and a half more for the fuse for no other reason than that the watch keeps time longer. War contracts are awarded on the principle of getting the least one can for the most money.

Mr. Harris' evidence, by the way, was the occasion for Mr. Justice Duff coming to clinch with Ewart, K.C., lawyer-in-chief for Major General Sir Sam Hughes. Mr. Ewart has been in the habit of objecting whenever a question barked too near home—objecting that such questions were not relevant when they strayed in honest pursuit of a fact one step beyond the matter mentioned in the Kyte charges, which are supposed to be the limits of the inquiry. In view of Mr. Harris' evidence, Mr. Justice Duff laid it down that quite a few embarrassing questions would henceforth be relevant. A ruling of the court to the effect that any war material of which the fuses under inquiry were part can be investigated, also bids fair to open up a new and interesting vein of thought. These fuses handed out to the two American companies were part of certain complete shells costing $16.50, $17.58 and $18.50 each. This fact will uncover some $70,000,000 worth of shell contracts awarded by the old Shell Committee, including one order for 100,000 shells awarded to the Bertram Company, awarded to the Bertram Company, but afterwards cancelled by the Munition Board. Some of these contracts are said to be very juicy.

Meanwhile some very clever tricks are being played to discount the revelations before the Royal Commission, an Ottawa local paper being used for this purpose. For instance

The Daily Mail from Copenhagen says that a large German fleet which has left Kiel for Riga includes the new battleship, Hindenburg and several other battleships of the largest type.

1881 and 1902 six other determinations of the height of the mountain were made at five stations, all excepting one being nearer to the mountain than the previous surveys. These six new determinations gave a mean value of 29,141 feet after correction for refraction. According, therefore, to our present information, Mount Everest is 139 feet higher than it was earlier computed to be.

Why is it, then, that this latest result of the scientific computation of the height of Mount Everest has not yet appeared in books and maps? It is because the Indian survey is not convinced that the final determination has been reached. It says that the height, 29,141 feet, is a more reliable result than 29,002 feet, but the more recent determination is still probably too small. It desires to acquire more thorough knowledge of the problems of refraction and of the effects of deviations of gravity upon trigonometrical work before announcing the final determination of the elevation of the world's highest mountain. Meanwhile it will retain on its maps the first determination of 29,002 feet.

This decision certainly commended itself. It would be more vexatious than useful to change the figures now and then in order to add or subtract a few feet as the latest determination of the mountain's height. It is better to wait until refinement of scientific method yields the closest approximation possible. This is the suggestion of the Indian survey, and all map makers have apparently adopted it.

As the Times Change.

In the sixties the customary proposal was, "Will you be mine?" Very faintly signs are showing that men will yet say, "May I be yours?" It will take time, for the possessive, the dominating instinct in man, is still strong, and long may it live, for that is the vigor of the race. ROMANCE OF THE BAHAMAS.

Life in Nassau Was Once a "Purple Princely Thing."

During the American war between the states Nassau of the Bahamas was very much on the tongues of men, as the devil-may-care emporium of contra- band cotton, whereby hangs many a dashing sea story, some of which you can still hear from the lips of the men who took part in them.

The whole history of the Bahamas, since Columbus made his first landfall in the western seas on Watling's island, has been a fantastic record of desperate opportunism. The prose of "legitimate" business has seldom dulled the edge of precarious prosperity on these derelict islands, whose very existence still seems at the grudging mercy of the sea.

Buccaneering, wrecking and blockade running—no more tedious employ than these masculine professions occupied the Bahamians for generations, and so long as there were merchantmen to be boarded or scuttled, rich cargoes to be harvested from the white fanged reefs or cotton to be run to Wilmington at a profit of $100,000 the trip life in Nassau was a purple princely thing, and even the shoeblacks in Bay street played pitch and toss with gold.—Richard Le Gallienne

Burial Customs of the Hittites.

Although the tombs of the necropolis had been rifled at an early date, a great deal that is new was learned about the burial customs of the Hittites. Graceful vases, simple in design and undecorated, held the ashes of the cremated body, together with any trinkets the person was wearing at the time of death. A small vase about a foot high was inclosed in a footed vessel of cylindrical shape, which was beautifully decorated in patterns like those of Crete and Cyprus. Around the middle vessel were grouped various dishes containing burial gifts or oil, most of them plain, but some of beautiful shape and as thin as modern china, though unglazed. It can well be seen that these two vessels would protect the ashes from dampness from below, but as both were open at the top there was a large cover, like an enormous bowl, inverted over the other two vessels.—Christian Herald.

A Strange Situation.

"Humor is a very funny thing," said Binks.

"It ought to be," said the philosopher.

"Oh, I don't mean that way," said Binks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blessed if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the philosopher.

"Are what?" said Binks.

"Blessed if they can see an English joke," said the philosopher. "It is a sign of an unusually keen vision."

HE COULD PLAY CHESS.

And He Proved That Fact in a Most Emphatic Manner.

In Austria-Hungary some years ago there was a marvelous chess player, whose name and residence were unknown, but who every now and then displayed his remarkable skill in the game. The last story of him was told by James H. Hyatt of Philadelphia, who had then just returned from Budapest.

"I was playing chess with a friend in a cafe," said Mr. Hyatt, "and plainly saw my defeat, when a little bit of a shriveled Pole with a tray of cheap jewelry stood in front of us and offered his wares in most persuasive tones. 'Go away,' I said.

"You can beat him," answered the peddler, whose attention was on the game.

"What do you know about it?" I asked.

"May I tell him?" he inquired, looking at my opponent.

"Certainly. Crack away," came the reply in a tone of assurance.

"Take his knight," said my self appointed instructor. I did so to humor him, though I lost my queen by the operation. But, much to my surprise, I found that the very next move gave me the game.

"Let me play with you?" asked the peddler. 'I mate you in the moves you say and where you say.'

"If you do I will give you 10 florins," I answered. 'Take the white men. Mate me on my queen's fourth square in twenty-two moves if you can.'

"We started in, my friend keeping account of the moves, and moved rapidly. After about a dozen moves I had the advantage of a bishop and a pawn and was assured I would defeat my aggressive little opponent. When he let a castle go by an apparently careless play I was sure of victory. Then came a sudden change in the situation, and I had to move my king out of check. I was on the defensive and in rapid retreat.

"Twenty-one moves," said my friend as the little peddler put me again in check with his knight.

"Mate!" cried my opponent as he swung his queen across the board.

"My king was on the queen's fourth square.

"I gave him 10 florins, and he walked away shaking his head and hands with infinite satisfaction."

Dreams As Omens.

From the earliest times recorded in history men have believed in the prophetic character of dreams. So far as we know, the first to deliberately and systematically attempt the interpretations of dreams was Amphyctyon of Athens, who lived about the year 1490 B. C. The Bible mentions dreams in many places, and we are entitled to conclude from the Biblical references that there were professional interpreters of dreams who were not infrequently resorted to by the dreamers.—Exchange.

PLANETS AND GRAVITY

The Vast Difference in Conditions Upon Mars and Jupiter.

In an article entitled "Is Mars Alive?" in the Popular Science Monthly Waldemar Kaempffert describes the possible appearance of a Martian. In speaking of the different conditions prevailing on the planets Mr. Kaempffert says:

"The bigger the planet on which you live, the harder it is for you to move about. If you were suddenly transported to Jupiter, the largest of the planets, and if you were able to live on its semi-molten surface, you would find it hard to lift your arm. A steam crane would be welcome assistance in moving your body about. This is due entirely to the enormous gravitational attraction which Jupiter would exert upon you. The bigger the planet the harder are you pulled down to its surface; the harder it is to put your foot forward.

"Mars is only one-ninth as massive as the earth. Hence you would weigh much less on Mars than you do on the earth. A Martian porter could easily carry as much as a terrestrial elephant. A Martian baseball player could bat a ball a mile. A very ordinary Martian athlete could leap with ease over a moderately sized house. Many Sided Kicks of the Camel.
A camel's hind legs will reach anywhere—over his head, round his chest and to his hump. Even when lying down an evil disposed animal will shoot out his legs and bring you to a sitting posture if he wants to. Compared with a camel a mule is really a most considerate kicker, so beware
when the camel looks as if he is going

It is related of a certain German sa-

Vinegar made from honey has an ex-honey. Give it air and keep it in a warm place, where it will ferment and make excellent vinegar.

In early times the coroner in En-

King Alfred had a predilection for we would regard as gigantic. Three

AN INGENIOUS SNARE.

Uncanny Insect Trap With Which the Pitcher Plant Is Armed.

No trapper ever invented a snare for his prey more ingenious or a trap that ever had a higher percentage of "catches" than the pitcher plant, for few insects ever escape from the clutches of this horticultural meat eater. He catches them, holds them, drowns them
and finally eats them.

And while he's doing it he smiles so innocently and prettily that you would imagine him one of the quietest and most peaceable flowers of the woods.

His leaves are his insect traps. They are a greenish purple and fold together
like a cornucopia, with a half closed lid covering the top. The inner walls of this "pitcher" are lined with hairs,
which point downward and are covered with a sweet, sticky fluid.

This fluid is regular "candy" for the bees and flies. The insect enters the half closed door of the pitcher, tastes
the honey and begins to explore the interior. As he crawls forward the hairs bend with him and give him free passage. But when he tries to return he finds that these hairs are veritable barbed wire entanglements to keep him a prisoner.

The insect tries to fly out, and the curve at the top of the pitcher bars his way. He dodges this way and that, bewildered, until he tumbles in a little
well at the bottom of the pitcher,
where he drowns.—Exchange.

So great is the heron's reputé as a fisher that it has long been thought that its feet, owing to some peculiar scent or oil which they were supposed

Manager Horsman Finally O Credit System of Purchasing

An important and significant speech forecasting radical policies of social reform affecting both the country and the cities, was given by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., at the Annual Meeting of the Provincial Liberal Women's Association.

"The abolition of the bar" declared Mr. Rowell, "has removed one of the great obstacles to genuine social reform. We have been but clearing the deck, so to speak, for a great forward movement in this province. No one will claim that under our existing social conditions there is a fair and equitable distribution of wealth. We must grapple with the situation and endeavor to see that men who labor with their hands, the workers of the nation, should receive full justice. Not charity, but justice."

Mr. Rowell declared that among the necessary reforms were that our educational system should be revised and recast to meet the new conditions of life, that agriculture, the oldest and most honorable of all occupations, should be placed in the commanding position which it should hold in the life of the nation; that every child should receive a fair chance to make the best of life's opportunities; that the industrious workingman, who by sickness or misfortune is thrown out of employment, through no fault of his own, should be protected from want during the period of sickness or unemployment and that a life of toil, honorably spent, should not end in an old age of penury and want.

To secure the necessary revenue for such plans of social reform, there would not only have to be a serious and determined effort to practise economy and thrift, but Mr. Rowell also asked in this connection the following pointed questions:

"Should a portion of the increased land values in our urban centres, created by the growth of the community, be taken to help to finance these services which are for the benefit of the community? Should the more wealthy and more favored, whose wealth has been possible by the exploitation of our natural resources or the toil of their fellow citizens, be asked to make substantial contribution to the public welfare?"

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE HYDRO.

Sections of the Conservative press as well as a large body of public opinion, are still convinced that the Hearst Government is opposed to Hydro. An example of this feeling may be seen in the following extracts from a recent editorial in the Toronto Telegram, Conservative:—

Ontario's oil trust and nickel trust are affiliated with a community of interests in the United States. These affiliated interests have sympathizers in high places of government at Ottawa, in Queen's Park, Toronto and in Washington, D.C.

"Big power interests and allied electric and other trusts on both sides of the line will be menaced by the establishment of a public ownership agency that can produce and distribute three or four hundred thousand horse power of electric energy for $7 or $8 per horse power.

"It is to be hoped that the Hearst Government is heart-whole in its devotion to the Hydro cause. The hist-

Another stage in the development of facilities for the Chevrolet Company of Canada, Ltd. reached this week when the company's headquarters of the continental headquarters of the company is located in one half of the first floor of the Temple Building, Richmond streets. At this time the office of the manager of the company, Mr. H. Horsman, is located at the head of the Carriage Company, whose office is at Perth avenue, West Toronto. The company was originally intended as the headquarters of the Chevrolet plant of the Chevrolet Company.

Coincident with the opening of new offices was the appearance of the new Chevrolet model, a 1916. This was placed on view in the new office, and at some of the main branches or agencies of the company. At the same time the announcement was made that the production at the new plant has now reached a volume of 1,000 cars a month. The first Canadian car was sold only last December. Last year the first Chevrolet car of the present design made its appearance in Canada.

It is the intention of the company to look after the entire trade secured through the company, but no exports to other countries are yet being made. Canadian factories. The foreman of the plant is being filled at one of the factories in the States by the Canadian plant is behind in for the Canadian market, it is claimed.

The Canadian Chevrolet has not yet really organized staff, it is claimed, yet there are agents around the country of these is receiving a share of the business, and an effort is being made to satisfy the present demand of Canadian dealers. The Chevrolet is scattered from coast to coast, many in the far west were sold by Mr. Horsman himself when he was on tour to Vancouver late last year. The business is being carried on a strictly cash basis and Mr. Horsman is much opposed to credit systems which are certain amount of vogue in some cities. In the opinion of Mr. Horsman there is no better system of cash arrangement, and a dealer as well as a manufacturer is benefitted thereby. The man who has not the money to purchase the car at the full price for the car at the purchase has a business in an automobile, according to the statement of Mr. Horsman.—Toronto News.

Government is heart-whole in its devotion to the Hydro cause. The historic fact is that there is not a member of the Hearst Government any more than there is a member of the Borden Government on record as having helped the Hydro in the dark days when the Hydro needed help."

The Globe, in discussing the whole situation and referring particularly to the McGarry-Beck Feud, says, "Much is being said and done that will shake public confidence in the Hydro system and make it a political football instead of a great and beneficial public service managed on non-partisan lines. All this is bad for the Hydro-Electric. It reveals to the public what has been very well known for some time in the inner circles of the Conservative party, that relations between Sir Adam Beck and the McGarry faction of the Hearst government are strained almost to the breaking point.

The Globe believes that the friction will continue until Sir Adam Beck is forced to give up the work he has of success, or until the Government carried on with a wonderful measure in Queen's Park frankly recognizes that the control of the Hydro-Electric system should be vested largely in Commissioners appointed by the municipalities whose financial backing alone made the system possible. The Government in seeking to exercise close control and in refusing the municipalities an adequate share in the management of the Hydro-Electric system are displaying an autocratic tendency that is resented all the more by the municipalities because of a general belief that autocratic control is favored in Queen's Park as a means of forcing out Sir Adam Beck.

Strabo and Josephus both affirm that the Egyptian glass workers were so well skilled in their art that they imitated the amethyst and other precious stones to perfection. Strabo mentions a cup of glass which could be hammered into any desired shape, the material of which it was composed being as ductile as lead.

Harvey Waters, an expert on patent cases, had occasion to write Rufus Choate on some important question and when he received the reply was unable to read a word of it, so took the missive to Mr. Choate and asked him what he had written. Mr. Choate replied, "I never can read my writing after the ink is dry, but if you tell me what it is about I will tell you what I have written." And he did.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chap- ter, I.O.D.E.

Many of our friends have most kindly responded to our appeal for clothing for the destitute French and Belgians, in consequence of which, we have been able to forward two boxes of excellent garments lately, and here- with desire to express our grateful thanks to those who have contributed to this result, and would ask the same favors of others who may still have something to send.

A splendid case of hospital supplies and the most approved surgical dress- ings was shipped this week for the French Hospitals, where, as we have frequently pointed out, these supplies are so greatly needed, and more particularly so, since the terrible and long-drawn out assaults on Verdun have been experienced, which have been so gallantly and determinedly met by our grand French allies, but yet at such an appalling loss in brave men.

For these reasons our work in this respect must not become lax, but, on the contrary, must be prosecuted with increasing energy.

Nevertheless our hospitals at home have, as a consequence, inevitably suffered from the energetic activities put forth all over the country in war- work. Among these has been our own Tuberculosis Hospital at Kingston, the Sir Oliver Mowat Memorial, which has been carrying on a grand and humane work ever since its establish- ment, and open to all sufferers from that most insidious disease through- out the county of Lennox and Addin- gton.

Doubtless our friends in the country as well as those in town should they have any left-over marmalade or jam would like to assist us in sending a case of these delicacies to this worthy institution.

A number of pairs of the new style of socks with cotton legs, approved some time ago by the Red Cross Society headquarters, have been knit- ted by our members and brought to our rooms. We shall send this style of sock in our supplies during the summer.

Our room is open every Thursday and Saturday afternoon. Kindly send in your donations on either of those days.

The values we offer at our opening sale will sur- prise you. Watch for bills announcing this sale.

INDELIBLE MARKING.

Advantages of Using Just Ordinary Blueprint Solution.

There are many occasions upon which it is necessary to mark linen or wearing apparel indelibly with one's name and address, yet the ink sold for this purpose is not always convenient to use or attractive in appearance, says the American Boy.

A very good substitute is the ordinary blueprint powder, sold by any photographic dealer, a thick solution being made and used just as the ordinary ink would be. Instead of fixing this by the use of a hot iron, it is made permanent simply by washing in several changes of cold water. When thoroughly fixed the writing will appear in a very pretty shade of blue. Should you prefer, a rubber stamp may be used instead of a pen. In this case a little glycerine should be mixed with the solution, which should be spread upon a clean cloth or blotter. This is then used as an inking pad for the stamp.

Aside from its convenience marking with blue print solution has the advantage that traces of the writing or any stains caused by it may be removed if desired by the application of a solution of tannin.

Gagadig Gigadab.

There was a quaint old man in Manchester, England, who for many years went by the unique name of Gagadig Gigadab. His original name was John Smith, and for many years he brooded over the possibilities of mistaken identity involved in it. The name figured frequently in criminal records, and he became abnormally apprehensive lest he might be confused with some of the bad John Smiths. At last what he feared so much actually happened. One morning the papers reported the arrest of an accountant in a bank for embezzlement, and through some blunder of the reporter the identity of the embezzler was confused with the subject of this article, who was also a bank accountant. Then and there he determined to assume a name like unto

To Find the Water Level in Soil.

In the Farm and Fireside is the following advice to the farmer who is about to plant his crops:

"The water level is a term used in speaking about soils. It means the depth in the ground where the soil is saturated with moisture.

"To find it simply take a post hole digger and dig down until water stands at the bottom of the hole. Do this in an ordinary season when the ground has about the average amount of moisture. For most crops the water level should be about three feet below
the surface, for alfalfa at least five feet. A water level two to three feet deep is excellent for the majority of farm crops."

Winter in Russia.

What winter can be like in Russia
was discovered by Napoleon in 1812
and by Charles XII. of Sweden a century earlier. Charles made a successful drive into Russia in 1708, but winter overtook him in October. The cold was so intense that wood could not be made to ignite in the open air. Wine and spirits froze, birds fell dead on the wing, saliva congealed on the men's lips. Says one who went through that terrible winter with the Swedish army.
"You could see some without hands,
some without feet, some without ears
and noses, unable to walk upright, but creeping along like quadrupeds."—Lon-

Many Horses Required For Military Service

OTTAWA, May, 21.—Advices from the War Office indicate that a very considerable number of horses for military purposes will be required from Canada this summer. Buying on a somewhat extensive scale is to be resumed by the British Remount Commission, with headquarters in Montreal. About sixty thousand horses have been purchased in Canada for war purposes by the allied Governments since the outbreak of the war,
while more than six hundred thousand have been purchased in the United States. Probably another twenty thousand will be purchased in Canada
this year. This insures a steady mar-

BELGIAN ARMY IS FIT 120,000 HOLD 20 MILES

Havre, May 4.—The steady flood continuing in the Yser valley made operations practically impossible between Dixmude and the sea. And so it follows that the official communi-ques in winter did not often speak of the Belgian army.

The Belgian army occupies in Belgiam Flanders a front of nearly 35 kilometers (almost 20 miles). If that strip of land seems very small when compared with the immense western front, it must not be forgotten that Belgium is a small country and that its population, while quite dense is inferior to that of London.

In spite of the war's visissitudes,
the Belgian army has now a moral and technical value which foreigners who have not seen it would hardly suspect.

In the first place, from the equipment point of view, its armament is all that can be desired. What it lacked in ordnance at the beginning of the war, has since then been abundantly supplied. It now has heavy field artillery which it did not possess in August, 1914; its pieces of ordnance can destroy the most solid German works. As to its gunners, they are of the best. Also the army has greatly increased its stores of machine guns. It has now, in large numbers, hand grenades, a most efficient arm, which it had not at its disposal before the spring of 1915. It even possesses a new grenade of mul-tipole explosions, invented by a Belgian engineer-officer, and which plays
terrible havoc in the enemy's ranks.

Its cavalry, always excellent, has been well kept up. The aviation services have been developed and carried to a remarkable training point. A force of auto-cannon, entirely manned by Belgian officers and soldiers, have been, on the special request of the Russian staff, who lacked the elements of such a division, sent over to Russia, where they are presently taking part in the operations.

120,000 FIGHTING MEN.

An interesting question is to know how the Belgian army has been able to maintain its effective forces. The Belgian army, in fact, has been at the front for over twenty months and it

tism; they did not hesitate to leave their home to go and join.

The Germans themselves admit that more than 20,000 Belgian youths thus succeeded in crossing over to Holland.

The Belgian Government, on the other hand, did not fail to take the necessary measures to fill up the gaps made by the incessant skirmishes of trench fighting. Instruction camps were organized in France where volunteers and recruits were sent.

KING ALBERT'S SPIRIT.

There is one detail little known abroad, but which is symbolical:
that is, the king's residence has always been in Belgium. Never has he wanted to leave the Belgian soil.
After the fall of Antwerp, the French Republic anxious to give a token of high deference to the Belgian royal family, had prepared for them at Mavre a sumptuously furnished villa.
The Belgian sovereign was deeply moved by this attention; but he never came to The Havre. He persists in living in a modest private residence on Belgian soil, not far from the sea, when he is not at his headquarters on the Belgian front. It is there the King and the Queen patiently wait for the day when the general offensive of the allies shall have liberated the Belgian country.

Upon the whole, the Belgian army
can be said to be presently stronger,
both materially and morally, after 20
months of war, than it was in August, 1914.

CHANGE OF UNIFORM.

The Belgian authorities, taking advantage of the lessons of the war,
have completely changed the trooper's uniform. Instead of the old suit, generally blue or dark green, set off
with gaudy colors, the Belgian soldier now wears a uniform having the color of dead leaves, most comfortable, and very little visible.

After the fall of Antwerp the Germans, wishing to prevent both the flight of their own deserters and the exodus of Belgians of military age who had remained in Belgium stretched all along the Belgo-Dutch frontier a network of barbed wire reinforced by other wires with an electric current. Liquor and the Law

DUDLEY LARNIGAN, district attorney of New York, was a man who would never be suspected of hysterical fear. His word was good. When he said a thing it was taken for granted that he knew exactly what he was talking about and that he had the facts to back up his statements. And yet he was at this time almost the laughingstock of the city that had swept him into office at the last election by an unprecedented majority. The newspapers, while they did not actually attack him, made fun of him. His own friends looked at him askance. Even his own son, Bruce Larnigan, an unpaid and volunteer assistant in the district attorney's office, shared the prevailing opinion, at least to a certain extent. Father and son were talking.

"I've no doubt that there's a good deal of graft. We all know there is, in fact," said Bruce. "It's not so very long since I was admitted to the bar, and, of course, I haven't been in this office long, but I've seen a few things. Still, to say that there is a syndicate made up of respectable men, big business men, that practically makes a business of crime—I think you went pretty far, dad."

Dudley Larnigan sighed. He wasn't at all angry. He looked at his son patiently and a little wearily.

"You think I went pretty far," he said. "Half the city thinks I'm insane, I believe. And yet I shall prove, if I live, every charge I have made. I shall prove that the most powerful organization this country has ever seen has its center right here in New York—an organization founded on the determination to secure unfair advantages—graft—for its members. I shall prove that this organization will not stop and has not stopped at murder!"

Bruce laughed uncomfortably.

"Can't you tell me more, then?" he asked. "Why, there must be men in this organization that I know—men who are supposed to be respectable!"

address carefully, and then, with a gesture of dislike and distrust, he shrugged his shoulders. "I thought so," he said. "It's from them."

Bruce laughed aloud.

"What do you mean, dad?" he asked. "Are you afraid they're sending you a bomb?"

"No; I don't think so," said Larnigan quite seriously and heedless of his son's jesting tone. "I don't believe the time has come for that yet. Open it, Bruce. We might as well see what's in it."

Bruce cut the strings, tore off the papers, and then, as the contents of the package were revealed, he started back, filled for the moment with horror. It was a yellow, grinning skull that he revealed, and on its forehead some words were written.

"Let the liquor trust alone," Bruce read. "We will phone for your answer."

Dudley Larnigan looked at him.

"You see, Bruce," he said, "there are some who take this business more seriously than you do."

"But—why—this is a joke—a silly, senseless, practical joke!" exclaimed Bruce. "Surely they wouldn't try seriously to frighten you with a stogy old trick like this?"

"Whether they tried seriously or not, they succeeded," said his father, "for I am certainly frightened, Bruce."

Bruce stared at him incredulously.

"You are frightened—by this?" said

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years. I was in constant misery from my stomach and my weight dropped down from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Several of my friends advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so. That was eight months ago. I began to improve almost with the first dose. No other medicine I ever used acted so pleasantly and quickly as 'Fruit-a-tives', and by using it I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble, and all pain and Constipation and misery were cured. I completely recovered by the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' and now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise 'Fruit-a-tives' enough".

"You said you were afraid," said Bruce.

"And so I am. I live in deadly fear. But, no matter how much I fear them, I fear my own conscience more. They can never punish me, no matter what they do, as would my own conscience if I betrayed my trust."

For the moment Bruce managed to shake off the depression that his father's mood and all the other circumstances had induced.

"They're trying to frighten you," he said. "Good Lord, this is the twentieth century! They're trying to frighten you with old tricks. They'd never dare actually to use violence."

"We shall see," said his father. "At least I shall do my duty, no matter what the outcome may be, as long as I am spared. And I have faith enough in you, my son, to believe that if the men who are opposed to me give the last proof of the truth of my words you will take up that duty and make it your own."

Bruce shook his head sadly as he

But while Bruce, wondering the very point of saying so Dorothy, Stone broke into a took Roger Maxwell's arm two older men came into it. Both greeted Bruce in the n ly fashion, while Stone shook hand, his eyes devouring her.

"I hear I'm to congratulate a young man," said Stone, at blushed becomingly. "By your father's given his friend want you to remember that the best of them—a good deal lately. Can't you persuade take a rest? He ought to where and play golf for two—get entirely rid of the worry of his office."

"I suggested something to him today, sir," said Bruce. "It's always been very hard for mother and myself to persuade spare himself in any way, as hard as if he hadn't a world, and, as a matter of fairly rich man."

"That's always the way—way," said Stone. "Well, you can to persuade him, in needs the rest."

"I think so, too," said Dorothy, "suppose you to somewhere else. Stone at some business to talk over, need the papers I have in here in our talk."

Bruce and Dorothy were loath to go. They smiled at each other as they went, and neft to see the look that Stanley sent after them, a look that have aroused Bruce's fear a had he seen it, knowing w of Stone's power.

Meanwhile District Attorney Larnigan had stayed at his enough to finish some important work and then had taken his place in his automobile.

"Drive me around the home, Jack," he said to his son. "The air is so beautiful to think it will rest me just around. Go up into the country and don't turn back time to get me home for dinner."

"Yes, sir," said the chauffeur.

Bruce got home long before his father's return. In spite of his concern for his father's fear was worried. As for his son, he had always opposed her husband's try into public life, and she ried every time he was late in getting home. Bruce calm her increasing nervousness he himself was worried, and grew dark he stood in the living room for the rays from the of the car that would herald his coming. At last he came far down the drive that led to his house. His heart leaped as he went back to call his mother. "Here he comes, mother, right, of course," he called. "silly to be worried."

She was in the conservatory back of the house, cutting of the dinner table. She went away from the front door. Then he slipped an arm around her waist, and they walked through the hall together.

...why, there must be men in this organization that I know—men who are supposed to be respectable!" "Supposed to be respectable!" said his father bitterly. "Why, they're the leading men of the city—of the whole country. They are business men who

...the leaders of our greatest industries. They control the business of the country as it is, but they want to get everything into their own hands. They want to stifle all competition. They are not content with the fair, legitimate profits. They want to get graft in every line and so double their profits. If they are not checked they will get a strangle hold on the nation. They will control elections everywhere; they will name one of themselves as president, and this country will cease to be a republic."

Bruce hesitated to answer. He saw the wild light in his father's eyes. He knew his father better than the men outside who laughed at him, who had jeered the speech that had started all the trouble. Never had Dudley Larnigan since his son could remember failed to make good any statement, any promise. Yet this—to believe

...faith than Bruce could muster. He was about to say something of the sort when there was an interruption. There was a knock at the door, and an office boy appeared, bearing a parcel, which he handed to the district attorney.

"This came by special messenger, sir," he said. "The boy said there was no answer, and he wouldn't say where it came from."

Bruce took the package and took out his pocketknife, making to cut the string, but his father checked him.

"Let me see that a moment," he said. He studied the writing of the

...I am certainly frightened, Bruce." Bruce stared at him incredulously. "You are frightened—by this?" said Bruce, looking from his father to the grinning skull. "Dad, you need a rest. Your nerves are upset. You've been overworking. You'd better take a vacation and get back into shape."

Dudley Larnigan shook his head sadly.

"I shall take no vacation until I have beaten the grafters or until they have beaten me," he said. "I have been waiting for the time to come, Bruce, when I could take you into my confidence regarding this. I see that nothing I can say will convince you that this is a real and deadly danger that I face. But the proof will come soon enough. It will be unmistakable when it does come. I know that I can count on you, my boy—that if they succeed in getting me out of the way they will still have to reckon with you."

In spite of himself Bruce was beginning to be affected. His father was so serious, was so evidently in deadly fear, that Bruce could not help being moved. It was impossible for him to believe when he tried to think things out that there was any basis for his father's fear, but it was equally impossible for him to believe that a man like Dudley Larnigan would give way to panic without the very gravest reasons.

"You needn't wait, Bruce," said his father finally. "I have a good deal of work to do, and I shan't need you."

Bruce got up and moved hesitatingly toward the door. Just then the telephone on his father's desk rang out sharply. Dudley Larnigan before he answered pointed to another instrument and Bruce, understanding, lifted its receiver to listen to the conversation.

A strange voice, evidently disguised, came thinly to his ear.

"Hello! Hello! Is this District Attorney Larnigan?"

"Larnigan, you know who is speaking. If you are in doubt look at the skull we sent you."

"I am looking at it."

"Be warned in time. That skull is the symbol of the uncertainty of life. We admire you—we admire any strong and brave enemy. But do not mistake foolhardiness for bravery. You can never beat us, and you will sacrifice yourself if you try. We do not offer you money. Leave us alone—or you will suffer."

"I shall do my duty. You have had before the only answer I shall ever give you. I am sworn to uphold and enforce the law. I shall do so at whatever risk to myself."

"Remember, this is the last chance you will have to save yourself. We bear you no ill will; we do not want to be obliged to move against you, but if you do not yield your blood be on your own head."

"I shall enforce the law. Sooner or later you will pay the penalty for all your crimes."

And on the word Dudley Larnigan, his forehead beaded with heavy drops of perspiration, slammed the receiver into the hook. He rose and stared at Bruce.

"Now do you believe?" he said. "You heard what I said. I think I have one chance in a million to escape them. I am a marked man. It is

...you will take up that duty and make it your own."

Bruce shook his head sadly as he went out. It seemed to him that he had hit upon the truth—that his father was breaking down from overwork and that he was taking seriously a melodramatic and absurd campaign of blackmail.

"No doubt attempts are being made to dissuade him from doing his duty," said Bruce to himself, "but he is allowing himself to be upset by threats that would only have amused him a few years ago. Poor old dad!"

Bruce himself had a pleasant errand. His steps took him to the home of Roger Maxwell, whose vast interests in the field of insurance had caused him to be known commonly as the head of what was called the insurance trust. But it was not the great financier that Bruce went to see. He seemed to be well known at the house. The servant who answered his ring smiled as she took his hat and stick.

"Miss Dorothy's in the library, sir," she said. "She is expecting you, sir, I'm sure."

Dorothy Maxwell as Bruce entered the room was standing near a window. As she heard his step she turned, with a glad little cry, and came straight to him.

"Bruce," she said, "I'm so glad! You weren't sure that you could come."

He took her in his arms and kissed her.

"I usually manage to come, though, don't I?" he said, with a laugh. "Still, it did look doubtful. Dad, you know?"

He stopped, and she frowned a little.

"Whatever is the matter with your father, Bruce, dear?" she said. "Father says he must have gone suddenly mad to make such a speech; that he's antagonized all the solid business men in New York by the wild statements he made. I think—I'm afraid he isn't quite as pleased as he was at the idea of our—of our engagement!"

"It's got nothing to do with us," declared Bruce angrily. "I'm not responsible for my father's actions. I think myself he's wrong about this; that he's been excited by things that have happened. But I can't let your father criticize him to me!"

"Of course not," she said soothingly. "And he won't, I'm sure. And, anyhow, Bruce, dear, we're not going to quarrel, you and I, even if it turns out that our fathers do."

Bruce was about to reply when he looked over Dorothy's shoulder and saw two men in the next room. One was her father, Roger Maxwell; the other was Stanford Stone. And Stone, who did not know that Bruce could see him, was regarding them with such a malevolent expression in his usually inscrutable eyes that Bruce was startled. Stone at this time was reckoned the most powerful man in the great financial world of New York. He was concerned in a hundred great enterprises. Even the Sunday news-

The car started again, and this side there was a muffled crash. Larnigan screamed. Bruce leaped forward. The door burst open, father staggered in, clutching sively at his side, and fell. Bruce looked. He saw the blood stained the floor, and then, mother, transformed by the action and gaining control of went to work to stanch the blood, Bruce raced for the door. He gave a number and waited patiently for the answer.

"Hello, hello!" he cried at Mr. Morgan? Hurry over here, Bruce Larnigan talking. My been badly hurt. It's very serious. Yes, bring your instrument."

Then he helped his mother what little there was to be done the doctor's arrival. Together got the wounded man on a cot made him as comfortable as could. He had fainted and longer conscious. to distrust Stone. She refused to accept him as an ally. Bruce had told her of a discovery he had made. Stone, while pretending to be friendly, had secretly contributed heavily to the cam-

Election day came. Bruce, in his office, waited, knowing he had done his best. The result was with the voters.
Would they trust him? Would they give him the power he required to do his work? He was waiting for Doro-

"You're going to win, Bruce," she said as he took her in his arms. "I

And then came Stone.
"Well," he said, "how does it look?"
"Bad for you," said Bruce uncompromisingly.

Stone laughed, with an excellent assumption of amusement.

"My dear boy," he said, "why do you mistrust me? I'm your friend."

Bruce looked at him. And just then city into a panic. This terrible and sinister proof of the powers of the forces of graft had caused a revulsion of sentiment. Men who had assailed the dead district attorney as a fanatic and a hysterical demagogue for his great speech attacking graft had to admit that there had been some basis for his sensational accusations. But these same men were afraid to move. So it had been easy for Bruce to secure the reform nomination for district attorney. No one else wanted it. The graft syndicate had made it too plain that peril as well as honor went with the office.

Bruce was making a splendid cam- paign, too, against the forces of graft. All the lower, vicious elements of the city were arrayed against him. From the dives, the gambling houses, the haunts of the drug sellers and the men and women who lived on vice and depravity, on crime and ignorance, the forces of evil sent out their cohorts against him. But Bruce, dwelling al- ways on his father's martyrdom, on his own determination not only to avenge the dead man, but at whatever risk to himself to continue to fight against all the forces that were ex- ploiting the poor and the ignorant, made a great impression and increased his own popularity tremendously.

He developed into an effective speak- er, and his bitter, ringing speeches made many converts to his cause. Dorothy Maxwell had opposed his en- trance into the campaign since she feared for his safety. Dorothy was beginning to be haunted by frightful suspicions, suspicions she had not dared as yet to communicate even to Bruce.

But once he was in the fight she stood by him. Ungrudgingly she con- sented to the postponement of their marriage that was made inevitable since it was impossible for him to take the time for his wedding during the campaign. And Dorothy, herself an ardent advocate of woman suffrage, did all she could to array the women of the city on his side.

"Women can't vote," she said in a speech she made to a suffrage organiza- tion. "but they can influence the men who can. Let every woman here go to the polls with some man and see that he votes right—for Larnigan and decency, against graft and corruption."

Thousands of women took up that cry, and the graft organization, which had expected a walkover when it had eliminated Dudley Larnigan, began to be worried and to see that it had removed one only to raise up another in his place whose youth made him even more formidable and dangerous.

And meanwhile Dorothy grew more and more suspicious. She learned that her father was bitterly opposed to Bruce's election.

"I won't have you taking part in his campaign," he said. "You make me look ridiculous."

He said this in the presence of Stan- ford Stone, but Dorothy was not afraid to speak her mind.

"I have a right to live my own life!" she flashed. "Why are you so opposed to Bruce?"

"Because he's a demagogue, a dan- gerous man," said Maxwell. "He, a rich man, is siding with the poor—the Socialists and the anarchists. He is a traitor to his own class."

"Now, Maxwell, Miss Dorothy is en-

a quick leap grappled with him, seized his hand and bent the wrist back till the knife dropped. Then quite calmly he pushed him out.

"Just an election rowdy," he said, with a smile. He handed Bruce the knife. "Perhaps you'll believe I'm your friend now. Well, I'll leave you."

"I'm grateful, Mr. Stone," said Bruce. But he was puzzled as he look- ed at Dorothy. Then his eyes fell on a bit of paper the thug had dropped. He picked it up and cried out in surprise and delight. "Look!" he said.

He gave it to Dorothy, and together they looked at it. It was a typewritten slip and read:

Come alone. For safety we will admit but one man. Will outline plan regarding Larnigan should he be elected. Number is 38 Hester street. Rap one, then two, then one. THE FIFTEEN.

"It's my chance," cried Bruce, with glowing eyes—"my chance to get on the trail of this secret enemy at last! I'll go!"

"Bruce, there'll be danger!" said Dor- othy.

"Then I must face it!" he cried. "My dear, you know I must!"

"Then I'll go with you!" cried Dor- othy.

That evening before the count was finished Bruce gave the signal and was admitted to a dive that looked like a fit meeting place for conspirators. Dor- othy attempted to accompany him, but was thrust back.

"We thought you'd come," said a man. "Mr. Larnigan, you walked into a trap. Now, you have one chance. Sign this paper agreeing to obey the commands of the fifteen or your polit- ical career is at an end; even your life is at stake."

Bruce stared at him, then laughed. "Do you think," he said, "you and your cutthroats can intimidate me?"

He made for the door. "Stop him, Bradford!" cried some one near the door. The man who had ac- costed him struggled with Bruce.

Outside came a pounding on the door. Dorothy in terror called for the police. As the door burst open a shot rang out. The police snatched Bruce from his as- sailants.

"Mr. Larnigan!" the sergeant said. "Yes, Larnigan!" said he.

"Mr. Larnigan!" he said.

"Officer, arrest these men and call the coroner. Bill Bradford is dead."

As Bruce and Dorothy left the room Bruce entered Bradford's name on a page of a memorandum book headed, "The Men Who Have Paid."

He looked toward Dorothy, smiled and then said: "I wonder who will be the next to pay the penalty? Thank God, I have rid the community of one of the fifteen!"

He felt in his pockets for some cigarettes and found none there.

When Freddy entered the settlement house on the Tuesday in question, it Mary's company, Ginhoulac felt no restraint. He greeted Miss Oakley of fustively and acknowledged the introduction to Freddy with an obeisance that blended grace and dignity in just the right proportion.

"Assuredly," thought Freddy, "this is something to be kicked."

"How d'ye do?" he said aloud. "Cold,

"Indeed he is," Oakley people are great shakes. "Your father's a privy councillor." "You don't say!" Freddy a trifle incredulous.

IT must be confessed that even as office boys go Bonfortunato Tagliatela was by no means of engaging personality. He was short for his fourteen years, and a tousled mop of hair hung low over his eyes, with which he squinted horribly.

So ill favored was the boy that he moved easy going John Oakley to protestations of disgust.

"By George!" he said to Freddy Furnival. "That office boy of yours is a freak. May I ask what on earth is due to you to hire him?"

"You may," Freddy replied. "The sole consideration was that he's a member of the Benvenuto Cellini circle of the Tasso Settlement on Mott street, at which your sister Mary is a worker."

"Quite so," Oakley commented. "But where's the connection?"

"Spoken like a brother!" said Freddy. "I suppose you don't know Mary is awfully down on me and calls me one of the idle rich."

"I do know it," Oakley replied. "Last night at dinner she said you were only playing at practicing law."

"Precisely," said Furnival, "and Taylor shall be the means of disillusioning partial to."

"You don't mean to say you feed him cigarettes?" said Oakley when the boy had gone.

"Not if," Furnival answered. "He helps himself to 'em, together with what small change I may have, out of the pocket of my office coat, when I'm not here. Last week he developed a new trick. I found my library dwindling volume by volume. He sells 'em at a book shop on Ann street. I followed him there last Thursday, and arranged to have him paid a quarter apiece for reports and thirty cents for digests. Very decent fellow, the proprietor. He turns 'em back to me at a nickel profit—and there you are."

"By Jove! What won't a fellow do when he's in love?" Oakley ejaculated.

"You're quite right," said Freddy, "but there are compensations. I've invited myself over to the Benvenuto Cellini circle tonight, as Taylor's guest, and Mary will be there. Here he is now," he broke off suddenly. "Greetings, Taylor!"

The stunted youth entered, and, grinning sheepishly, deposited a package of cigarettes on the desk, from which Freddy took it.

"Cigarettes used to come ten in a box," he said, as he opened the package, "but—ha, as I thought, there are only nine here! The trusts again, Oakley—you can't beat 'em!"

The Tasso settlement on Mott street accomplished two results, neither of which was important from the standpoint of sociology. Imprimis, it provided Hector Ginhoullic, its founder and head worker, with a living, and, secondly, it catered to a laudable and charming taste for "social service" in various wealthy young spinsters. One of these Hector had marked for his own.

"What others have done I can do," he declared to himself and laid siege to the heart of Mary Oakley.

To that serious person there could be no comparison between Ginhoullic, the Milanese of French extraction, and Freddy Furnival, only heir at law of Furnival's dry soap and magic cleaner. Freddy's perennial flippancy served but to irritate Mary, who was nothing if not earnest of purpose, while the suave and polished Ginhoullic appealed strongly to her sense of dignity.

True, Ginhoullic had no money and even made melancholy jest of his poverty to Mary.

"But you are rich in your life work," she would say.

Ginhoullic would answer with a resigned smile, induced, no doubt, by the aptness of Mary's observation. He would, indeed, be rich if his plans matured as he hoped. Moreover, he sincerely admired Mary. Her face was lovely rather than beautiful.

In most men her glance might well provoke a sense of their own unworthiness, but in Ginhoullic it aroused only self congratulation. The proposition seemed delightfully easy, save for one obstacle—namely, the cost of a suitable engagement ring—and this difficulty to something to be kicked."

"How d'ye do?" he said aloud. "Cold, isn't it?"

Ginhoullic agreed that it was "cold" and asked if Miss Oakley was to have the pleasure of demonstrating the settlement work to Mr. Furnival.

"Not exactly," Mary replied. "I met him by chance on the way over from the subway. He's here as a guest of one of the clubs."

"The Benvenuto Cellini circle," Freddy broke in.

"Ah, so!" said Ginhoullic. "You pronounce the Italian good."

"At the invitation of my friend Bonfortunato Tagliatela," said Freddy, enunciating all the liquid syllables with practiced ease.

"Too badda!" Ginhoullic murmured. "Too badda!"

"He isn't sick, is he?" Mary asked sympathetically.

"Notta seek," said Ginhoullic. "A-oh, gotta seek. I should to be seek. He take from my desk six of my cigars, and I find him smoking them in my office."

"I'm sorry to hear it," Freddy commented.

"It is no matter," Ginhoullic replied, with a smile and a shrug. "I keep him down to the street corner. He gotta come back, I promise you."

"Then Mr. Furnival is deprived of his host," said Mary.

"Notta so, gotta so," Ginhoullic broke in hurriedly. "Mine shall be the pleasure to act as host." He turned to Furnival. "And to show you how it is we uplift the poor foreign boy," he said, with a fine sweep of his soft, white hand.

Freddy smiled at the involuntary humor of the head worker's phrase.

"Not with the foot," Ginhoullic hastened to add, "like that unfortunate Tagliatela. Bad manners we condone here, but dishonesty must be treated—must be treated, ah!"

"Summarily," Mary helped out.

Ginhoullic smiled his thanks, with a dazzling show of regular, white teeth.

"Just so," he murmured. "My English is a little difficult at times, but with Mees Oakley to help me, I become like—how shall I say it—like another Shekspeera!"

At the compliment a faint shade of pink came over Mary's pale features, not unnoticed by Freddy, whose mental attitude at the time might well have been translated by a low whistle. For the rest of the evening he watched Miss Oakley and the head worker closely, with a net result of six hand clasps and six resulting blushes from Mary, intermingled with a multitude of dazzling smiles from Ginhoullic.

"Ginhoullic's a pretty good sort," he said at length—"that is, for a dago."

"A dago!" Mary exclaimed. "Freddy Furnival, I beg of you!"

"That's all right," Freddy explained. "He is a dago, isn't he? That's the popular name for an Italian, just as Yank is for a down easter. I'm a Yank, you know, and you can call me one if you want to."

"I might be justified in calling you any number of things," Mary rejoined coldly, "except a gentleman!"

This time the low whistle grew audible, and Mary stopped short.

"I can go the rest of the way alone," she said.

"I'll take you to the subway station," Freddy murmured huskily.

"What on earth are you about?"

For answer Freddy took from his waistcoat pocket it upon the desk blotter.

Oakley lay back in his gasped like a landed trout.

"Perhaps," he said at length, "be good enough to explain it."

"By all means," Freddy said. "This morning when I came Taylor tossing a small object and catching it again with a ty that it looked like a lot balls issuing from a Roman soon as he saw me he pock curiosity being aroused, I p knuckle him."

"Knuckle him?"

"Precisely," Freddy went on. "Schoolboy trick. Hurts like Old Torquemada knew him Oakley, for it wasn't five minutes before I had it out of my pocket, and there you see it."

"How did Taylor get hold of it?"

"More knuckling made him Freddy." "He confessed that he attended the Benvenuto Cellini circle, having made his peace with Ginhoullic. Of course he was wearing the ring, and when he went into the anteroom to wash and returned without it he knew that she must have left it. That's precisely why I found it out immediately. There you are, Lucky I caught it when I did."

"And where is Taylor now?" "I've fired him," said Freddy. "He meant to do it every day for three weeks, but I've always about it until today."

"Why on earth didn't you arrest him?"

"What's the use?" Freddy said. "We have the ring, and we can take it back to Mary."

IV.

The Oakleys dwelt in a basement residence on West Avenue. One glance at the w fanlight of the colonial front the curtained elegance of windows established the respectability as firmly as did Bible and the "Social Register" beneath the big mahogany, and library. It was to this club Freddy had been ushered on their arrival.

"Light up while I go and he said, and started for the door. Hardly had he reached it when from the lower floor half of rage, half of hysteria at once halted Oakley at Freddy to his feet.

"Now, what in the world Oakley ejaculated.

Misery in Back, Headache and Pain in Limbs.

Dear Mr. Editor: For more than a year I suffered with misery in the back, dull headache, pain in the limbs, was somewhat constipated and slept poorly at night until I was about ready to collapse. Seeing an account of the wonderful qualities of "Anuric," prepared by Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., I sent for a box, and before using the whole box I felt and still feel improved. My sleep is refreshing, misery reduced, and life is not the drag it was before. I most cheerfully recommend this remedy to sufferers from like ailments.

Yours truly, W. A. ROBERTS.

NOTE: You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists of Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints, and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing Tablet, Dr. Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

I know of one or two leading druggists in town who have managed to procure a supply of "Anuric" for their anxious customers in and around this locality. If not obtainable send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

"Give me the ring, Freddy," Oakley said. "I think I'll go downstairs and Mingled with Mary's soothing con-

 came an expostulatory growl.

"Confound it, sir, you're behaving

He took the stairs four at a jump,
 while Freddy went back to the library and closed the door behind him. For ten minutes the muffled sound of voices
 came in faint waves from the ground floor, until a decisive bang of the front door brought the conference to a close.

Freddy had been standing by the library window, gazing idly into the street, and he saw Ginhouliac leave the house. For one brief moment the enraged Italian stood muttering on the curb. Between his thumb and finger he held the ring, which glittered and flashed in the afternoon sunlight; then,
 raising his hand above his head, he fung it far into the roadway.

As Freddy turned from the window
 Oakley entered.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting,"
 he said, "but we've had the dickens of a row downstairs."

"Only a lovers' quarrel, I hope?"
 Freddy suggested.

"A very violent one," Oakley replied.
 "The fact is, when Mary said she didn't think his ring was valuable enough to make all that fuss about, Ginhouliac grew rabid and actually swore at her.
 He apologized immediately and said
 he thought she was calling his priceless old heirloom a valueless gift. After that, of course, Mary refused to have anything more to do with him,
 and when I gave her the ring she instisted on his taking the precious going."

"Was he glad to get it back?" Freddy asked.

"He must have been," Oakley replied.
 "The governor says that when he heard it was lost he acted like a man scared out of his wits. Apparently he valued it very highly."

"Nevertheless I don't think he did,"
 Freddy rejoined.

"How do you know?" said Oakley.

"Because I was standing by the window as he went out, and I saw him throw the ring into the street."

"Impossible!" Oakley ejaculated.

A few minutes later the two young men, aided by the servants and half
 the small boys of the neighborhood,
 were poking in the dust of West End avenue for the discarded bauble. They searched without avail, however, until dusk.

"I guess it must have gone down a sewer opening," said Freddy.

"Or into the pockets of one of the searchers," Oakley corrected. "In any event it's gone."

Freddy Furnival acquiesced in the sentiment with a solemn nod.

 usual washing process. Some old fash-

 The linen is allowed to remain in the buttermilk for a day or two, if neces-

 cool, clear water and later in warm

Always dry linen out of doors in Physical Fitness Woman's Big Asset.

No woman nowadays can afford not to be well.

Ill health—even mere "delicacy," with no positive manifestation of disease—
 costs too much. There is the obvious, direct expense of doctors' bills and medicines. But indirectly you pay a much higher price for not being well.
 If you are a wage earner your lost
 time and energy, due to a lack of physical strength, must also be computed in lost dollars.

Poor health will interfere constantly with your social good times. It will mar whatever beauty you may possess sooner than any other cause. If you are a wife and mother illness and weakness will interfere with your duties and the comfort of those dear to
 you. Whatever your station in life you will find that the role of invalid
 and weakling is no longer fashionable or popular. For awhile you will have the sympathy of your friends, but the best of them will be bored with you sooner or later. They can't help it. A worship of physical fitness is in the air, and instead of whining and plying yourself you must bend all your energies to the task of becoming well.

Cinnamon Rolls.

When it is desired to mold bread
 for baking take one loaf on a molding half inch pieces. Have considerable melted fat in a dripping pan and dip

 the top of each piece into the fat. Allow them to rise until after the rest of the bread is baked, so that the rolls may be very light. They should be baked from twenty minutes to half an hour.

Oakley cried. “Impossible! I gave it to Mary yesterday afternoon.”

“In spite of fact,” Freddy went on, “I believe I have it in my pocket right now.”

“Where is it?” Freddy asked. “In my waistcoat pocket and tossed on a desk blotter.”

“A large ruby and four diamonds,” he said, “according to plans and specifications.”

“Lay back in his chair and wait,” he said at length, “you’ll be able to explain this—this—means,” Freddy replied.

“When I came in I found a small object in the air, and I caught it again with such rapidity that it looked like a lot of colored light from a Roman candle. As I saw me he pocketed it. My being aroused, I proceeded to take it.”

“Where is it?” Freddy asked. “In my waistcoat pocket,” he said. “Hurts like thunder. I’ve never known his business, but it wasn’t five minutes before it was out of my worthy young hands. Where you see it?”

“Amen!” Freddy murmured piously. “I’m going home to clean up.” Oakley shook him warmly by the hand. “We’re all very much obliged to you,” he said. “I hope you’ll come around again this evening.”

Not only on that evening, but on many succeeding evenings Freddy called at the Oakley residence, until, six months later, Mary was ready to wear another ring.

“No heirlooms for mine!” said Freddy as he took the measure of her third finger with a piece of string. It shall be the conventional solitaire and the bluest whitest or the whitest bluest on Maiden lane!”

Accordingly, bright and early the next morning Freddy jumped off a Broadway car at the corner of Maiden lane and caromed from a policeman to a stunted newsboy, who was vigorous-

The embarrassed Tagliatella wriggled and struggled to free himself, but Freddy held him close.

“Come on to the sidewalk,” he said. “I’m not going to harm you.”

He drew his reluctant captive to a shop window and proceeded to interrogate him.

“Do you ever go to the Tasse Settlement these days?”

“Naw!” Taylor replied. “It’s blown up since Ginhowlac beat it.”

“Beat it?”

Hints About the Keeping of Your Favorite Fad.

“Table linen must be properly handled in the laundry if you would have it retain its freshness,” says Marie. Strong bleaches must never be used on fine table linens. Of course the linen is often badly spotted and needs to be cleaned in some way, but boiling water removes coffee spots, cold water removes cocoa stains and sunshine removes many more spots. When stronger agents must be used they should be applied and removed by intelligent hands.

SPENCER & ROSE

The annual meeting of the W.C.T. U., for election of officers will be held in the Board Room of the Public Library, Tuesday, May 30th, at 3 p.m. Reports from all the departments will be heard.

Barney McConville, a former resident of Napanee, died suddenly in Kingston on Friday last. Deceased was in poor health but not considered seriously ill at the time of his death. His wife was in Toronto. He was a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Abrams, Napanee. The funeral took place in Kingston on Monday.

Pte. Ray Hicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hicks, North Fredericksburgh, died on Tuesday in the Military Hospital at Halifax. Pte. Hicks was not in very good health when he left Belleville and on arrival at Halifax was taken to the hospital with pneumonia. His parents were notified and were on their way to Halifax when he died. The body will be brought to Napanee for burial.

Among the casualties of the past week appears the name of Captain Thomas D'arcy Sneath, son-in-law of Mr. W. S. Herrington. He is suffering from shell shock received in the recent battles about St. Eloi, and has been admitted to No. 7 Stationary Hospital at Boulogne. No further particulars of his condition have been received. Capt. Sneath has been continuously under fire in the trenches for eight months, and has been three times mentioned in despatches for conspicuous gallantry.

The many friends of Mrs. Geo. Colp, nee Minnie McLeod, were shocked to hear of her sudden death on Friday last at her home in Ocean Beach, California. Mrs. Colp was a native of Napanee and resided here until shortly after her marriage, when she and her husband went to California to reside. Besides her bereaved husband she leaves one small son, her mother who has lived with her for some years, and one brother, Mr. Chas. McLeod, Napanee, to mourn her untimely death. The cause of her death was hemorrhage of the brain. The funeral took place on Monday at Rosedale Cemetery, Los Angeles.

OBITUARY.

The Empey Hill community has been called upon to mourn the loss of a most estimable resident, in the person of Mrs. Edward Milling. Stricken with illness while in attendance at a social of the W.M.S. in the Empey Hill church, she was immediately cared for in the nearby home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Penny, and physicians summoned, who remained almost continuously at her bedside in the hope of effecting a speedy recovery. In a few days it seemed their hopes were being realized and the patient was removed to her own home, where, for about three weeks everything that modern medical skill could devise or loving hands could do. But on Monday morning, May 15th, she passed to her reward. After a brief service, held at the home on Wednesday afternoon, May 17th, interment took place in the beautiful family plot in Riverside cemetery, Napanee. Mrs. Milling was one of the most prominent workers in Empey Hill church, and a most highly esteemed neighbor, and her loss will be greatly felt, not only in the church, but the community as well. The family have the sincere sympathy of all in this, their hour of sad bereavement.

DEATHS

SHEPARD—At Napanee, on Saturday, May 20th, 1916, Frederick G. Shepard, aged 69 years and 3 months.

FARMERS, BEWARE OF THE CHANGE IN NAME OF THE "O. A. C. No. 72" VARIETY OF OATS.

At the Ontario Agricultural College for each of nine years in succession the O. A. C. No. 72 variety of oats has surpassed the Banner in yield per acre and in quality of grain. It has been the most productive and the most popular variety in the co-operative experiments throughout Ontario in each of the past five years, and it was awarded more first prizes than any other variety in the Field Crop Competitions with oats on 2,137 farms in the Counties of Ontario in 1915. In some of the competitions in both Eastern and Western Ontario it received all the prizes offered.
 Thirteen years ago the O. A. C. No. 72 variety of oats was originated at the Ontario Agricultural College from a single seed. It has made the best record of over three hundred varieties obtained from various parts of the world, and which have been tested out at Guelph for five years or more.
 A member of the firm of L. P. Gunson & Co., of New York State, visited the College, saw the O. A. C. No. 72 oats growing in the experimental plots, secured our reports, ascertained the source of seed, and early in 1916 bought six hundred bushels, at $1.40 per bushel, from a farmer living within ten miles of the Ontario Agricultural College. We have just learned that the name "O. A. C. No. 72" has been changed to "Imperial," that the College records have been appropriated, and that the reported yield as the standard weight per bushel of has been increased about six per cent., oats in the United States is 32 instead of 34 pounds. There oats, under the name of Imperial, have been advertised extensively in catalogue form, and numerous agents have been travelling from farm to farm over Ontario and elsewhere during the spring of 1916 selling this re-named variety of oats for $3.18 and upwards, per bushel. The oats were advertised in exactly the same way by L. P. Gunson & Co., and by Geo. K. Higbie & Co., also of New York State whose catalogues appear to be identical except in title pages.
 First class seed of the O. A. C. No. 72 variety of oats can now be purchased in abundance from Ontario farmers at $1.00 per bushel.
